

We choose Albany public schools because ...

(Flapjacks + families) x fundraising = FUN for a great cause!!

More than 230 members of the Albany School of Humanities community came out to the Applebee's restaurant in Glenmont on Sept. 29 for the annual ASH Parent-Teacher Association Pancake Breakfast.

The event raised nearly $1,100 to sponsor programs that will benefit ASH students throughout the year.

“ASH families and staff look so forward to this event because it is a time to get together and celebrate the start of a new school year as well as to promote a sense of community at our school,” said ASH PTA President Amber Jones.

“Parents and teachers working together is what makes this event such a great success, and it’s also what makes the learning environment so successful at ASH. We feel that it is all part of educating the whole child.”
